A surprising number of Australians subscribe to a satellite service to watch overseas programs. But with many broadcasters changing their digital transmissions to DVBS2/MEG4 format, a compliant set-top box is required. Strong's SRT4669X allows viewers to get all the existing DVBS MPEG2 channels plus record the new broadcasts.

But to use the new Strong satellite receiver as a digital recorder, you'll need an external USB hard drive – available at most computer stores quite cheaply these days.
